AIA has a long history in Asia, successfully managing through social upheavals and uncertain periods, earning an outstanding reputation reflecting AIA's trustworthiness, resilience, and commitment to stakeholders. Since early 2020, COVID-19 has created complex business conditions with unprecedented shifts in political, macroeconomic, and capital markets. In this context, AIA's financial strength and mission to help people live healthier, longer, better lives are more vital. I thank all AIA employees, agents, and partners who, despite severe challenges, care for communities and dedicate themselves to customers, their families, and our communities.

COVID-19 control measures impacted new business sales; new business value declined to USD 2.765 billion. We quickly adopted digital tools to boost efficiency. With relaxed restrictions, sales momentum recovered strongly into early 2021.

After-tax operating profit grew 5% to USD 5.942 billion; free surplus rose 7% to USD 5.843 billion, reflecting high-quality recurring earnings. Embedded value equity reached USD 67.2 billion. As of December 31, 2020, local capital coverage ratio was 374%, demonstrating strong capital and prudent financial management.

ESG

For over a century, AIA has positively impacted Asian customers' lives. Our communities face major ESG challenges: climate change, pollution, lifestyle diseases. The pandemic has underscored their complexity. As a lifetime partner, we're committed to a better, more sustainable future.

AIA participates in the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures, developing voluntary climate disclosure frameworks. We reaffirm commitment to these recommendations, engaging 1,400+ portfolio companies in 2020 and more than 30 external investment managers to influence how they manage climate risks and address climate issues.

Per Sustainalytics, AIA ranked 2nd in insurance for ESG risk management for the second consecutive year, and in 2020, MSCI upgraded AIA's ESG rating to A, primarily due to our integration of ESG factors into our investment function.

We recognize significant work remains in this area. We recently completed our Environmental, Social and Governance strategy review. I am confident our five strategic priorities?wellbeing, green operations, sustainable investment, talent and culture, and governance?will help us lead the industry in environmental, social and governance matters.

Outlook

In 2020, COVID-19 was the largest public health emergency in living memory. Affected businesses and households received unprecedented public and monetary support, mitigating extreme financial shocks and accelerating recovery, particularly evident in countries with sound health policies. However, significant differences exist between nations. Asia (ex-Japan) recorded the strongest global GDP growth. The global economy is emerging from deep recession into early recovery stages.

Though pandemic impacts persist, 2021 should be transitional; we remain cautiously optimistic. Markets anticipate vaccination programs and new therapies reducing infection rates and severity, enabling healthcare systems to respond effectively and lower mortality. While we don't expect pre-pandemic activity levels near-term, as confidence recovers, recovery should gradually expand from manufacturing to consumer and service sectors, especially in younger-population countries.

I'm confident in AIA's long-term prospects. Despite near-term uncertainties, strong domestic demand drivers and Asia's key demographic trends provide positive structural support. Rising incomes, low insurance penetration, and limited social welfare coverage drive continued demand for AIA products. We'll leverage our competitive advantages and strong growth track record to build sustainable futures and create shared value for all stakeholders.
